

Authors

ANNA ANSELMO (PhD) is associate professor of English Language and Translation at Università degli Studi di Milano. Her research interests include terminology theory, historical lexicography, critical discourse analysis (social actor theory), and British Romantic periodicals. She has published on the representation of social actors and social action involved in the Peterloo Massacre (2021, 2022), on conspiracy theories and Covid-19 in the UK (2022), and on medical terminology in the long eighteenth century (2023). Her book, The Poetics of Uncontrollability in Keats's "Endymion" (2016), offers an overview of eighteenth-century language philosophy and its repercussions on Romantic writing from a morphological perspective. She is currently working on a new monograph, titled Politics, Discourse, and the Press in the Early Nineteenth Century (forthcoming).

ROSMERY CJUNO HUAICHO has a degree in Literature and Linguistics from Universidad Nacional de San Agustín de Arequipa. She works in a specialty school for high-achieving students where she teaches Literature, Language and Linguistics. Her research interests focus on the understanding of linguistic and cultural interaction, focusing her scientific production on critical discourse analysis, comparative linguistic studies and sociolinguistics.

VALENTINA DI FRANCESCO (PhD) is a post-doctoral fellow at Università degli Studi di Ferrara. Her research focuses on tourism communication in English as operated by Italian institutions from a diachronic perspective. Her research interests are audiovisual translation, perception and reception studies, tourism studies and media studies. Her most recent publications are "Performance(s) of Voice Actors in the Simil Sync Technique: The Other Side of Dubbing", in Adapting Alterity in Anglophone Scenarios, edited by Giulia Magazzù and Angela Sileo (2025); Mapping Tourism Communication in the Emilia Romagna Adriatic Coast 60s-90s: A Distant Perspective, co-authored with Dario Del Fante (forthcoming).

FRANK JOSEPH DOMÍNGUEZ CHENGUAYEN is currently a part-time lecturer at Universidad Tecnológica del Perú and Universidad Peruana de Ciencias Aplicadas. He has undertaken doctoral studies in Linguistics at Universidad Nacional Mayor de San Marcos and holds Master's degrees from the same university and Pontificia Universidad Católica del Perú. His research interests revolve around the study of various linguistic and discursive phenomena within the framework of cognitive linguistics. His scholarly output is published in various scientific journals and thematic volumes in the field. He is currently recognised as a qualified researcher by the Peruvian State.

KIM GREGO (PhD) is full professor of English Language and Translation at Università degli Studi di Milano, where she teaches English Language and Linguistics. Her interests include translation studies, ESP (scientific, medical and political discourse), critical genre analysis and critical discourse studies applied to ethically debatable issues. Recent research projects she has been involved in focus on the discourse surrounding the great resignation and the advertising of pharmaceutical products.

RICHARD SANTOS HUAMÁN FLORES is currently a full-time associate professor at Universidad Nacional de San Agustín de Arequipa. He has a degree in Literature and Linguistics; he also has a degree in Education, specialising in Language, Literature and Philosophy; he is a lawyer by profession and holds a Master's degree in Developmental Psychology and Human Learning. He is currently a doctoral candidate in Linguistics at Universidad Nacional Mayor de San Marcos. He specialised at the Cervantes Institute and at Universidad de Zaragoza. Scholarship holder of the Santander Foundation (2017). He completed a teaching internship at Pontificia Universidad Católica del Perú in the framework of the Peruvian network of universities (RPU, 2018). His research interests revolve around the study of various linguistic and discursive phenomena within the framework of cognitive and Andean linguistics.

ILARIA IORI (PhD) is a postdoctoral research fellow at Università degli Studi di Ferrara. She holds a PhD in Human Sciences from Università degli Studi di Modena e Reggio Emilia. Her doctoral research focused on corpus-assisted metaphor analysis and the linguistic construction of Sinophobia during the Covid-19 pandemic. Her research interests include corpus-assisted discourse analysis, metaphor theory, and the linguistic construction of Otherness.

ANNA LA TORRE (PhD) currently serves as an academic expert at Università degli Studi di Milano while working as an independent historian. She holds a Bachelor's degree in Nursing, a Master's degree in Nursing Sciences from Università degli Studi di Milano, a Master's degree in History from Università Europea di Roma, and a PhD in the History of Science from Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona. Her professional experience includes clinical practice in various Italian healthcare institutions. Her primary research focus has been social and healthcare assistance during the Italian fascist period (1922-1945). She is a member of the TRANSHUMED research project (PID2019-104581GB-I00) funded by the Spanish State Research Agency, a member of the FEBE Association for Nursing History in Catalan-speaking regions, and communications officer for the European Association for the History of Nursing.

RODNEY LOKAJ is full professor of Philology of Italian Literature at Università degli Studi di Enna "Kore". A scholar of literary texts and traditions in late-Medieval and early modern Italy, his most significant publications to date regard St. Francis of Assisi, Dante, Petrarch, Poliziano, Bembo, Castiglione, Falcone, Garcilaso de la Vega, and Latin funerary traditions (ekphrasis, intertextuality etc.). An active member of many learned societies such as Società Dantesca Italiana, Accademia Francesco Petrarca di Arezzo, Accademia delle Scienze dell'Umbria and Société Philologique Europeene (Strasbourg), he also sits on the board of Accademia degli Ottusi of Spoleto and the American Association of Neo-Latin Studies. Commissioned directly, furthermore, by various leading institutions such as Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana and Archivio di Stato di Perugia (Umbria), he has published critical editions of seventeenth-century academic discourses, Latin hagiographical poetry, and newly-discovered fragments of Dante's Divine Comedy.

MAI MORSY TAWFIK is lecturer at the Department of Italian Language at the Faculty of Al-Asun at Ain Shams University. Her main research interests are lexicography, semantics, historical linguistics, language acquisition, applied linguistics and pragmatics. Some of her most recent publications include "Analisi degli errori lessicali più frequenti nell'italiano degli studenti egiziani", Italiano LinguaDue (2024), and "Mezzi linguistici di mitigazione lenitiva nella comunicazione giornalistica durante l'epidemia del Coronavirus", Rivista Italiana di Filosofia del Linguaggio (2024).

ARI MUSDOLIFAH is an assistant professor in the Indonesian Language and Literature Education Department at Universitas Balikpapan. She holds a Master's degree in Indonesian Language and Literature Education. Her research interests include linguistics, syntax, semiotics, discourse analysis, and rhetoric, with a focus on language and cultural communication. She has published extensively on a wide range of topics across multiple domains. Her work has appeared in reputable journals in Indonesia, contributing to the understanding of language as both a structural and sociocultural tool within the Indonesian context.

ANDREAS MUSOLFF is professor emeritus at the University of East Anglia. His research interests focus on the study of public discourse, the pragmatics of figurative language and intercultural communication. His most recent book publications include the monographs Political Metaphor Analysis: Discourse and Scenarios (2016), National Conceptualisations of the Body Politic: Cultural Experience and Political Imagination (2021), and the co-edited volumes Migration and Media: Discourses about Identities in Crisis (2019), Pandemic and Crisis Discourse: Communicating COVID-19 Public Health Strategy (2022).

RETNOWATY is an assistant professor in the Indonesian Language and Literature Education Department at Universitas Balikpapan. She holds a Doctoral degree in Applied English Linguistics. Her research focuses on pragmatics, translanguaging, and linguistic applications in English as a foreign language (EFL) and educational settings. She has published extensively on a variety of topics in multiple domains, with her research appearing in respected journals in Indonesia. Her work bridges theoretical linguistics with practical applications in language teaching and educational settings.

LAURA TOMMASO is associate professor of English Language and Translation at Università del Piemonte Orientale. Her research interests include critical discourse studies, corpus linguistics, and media and health communication. She is the author of Ageing Discourse in the News: A Corpus-Assisted Study (2023). Recently, her work has focused on integrating oral history with corpus linguistics and exploring the discourse surrounding collective and workplace well-being.

MARIANNA LYA ZUMMO is associate professor of English Language and Translation at Università degli Studi di Palermo. Her research interests cover issues in sociolinguistics, authenticity in discourses, communication dynamics, studies on critical discourse(s). Her research is primarily related to issues in digital exchanges and health communication in online contexts. Recent publications include “‘The War Is Over’: Militarizing the Language and Framing the Nation in Post-Brexit Discourse”, in Homing in on Hate: Critical Discourse Studies of Hate Speech, Discrimination and Inequality in the Digital Age, edited by Giuseppe Balirano and Bronwen Hughes (with Massimiliano Demata, 2020); “Performing Authenticity on a Digital Political Stage: Politainment as Interactive Practice and (Populist?) Performance”, Iperstoria: Journal of American and English Studies (2020); “Media and Crowd Diagnosis”, in Analysing Health Discourse in Digital Environments: Current Paradigms and Practices, edited by Franca Plastina (2022).